"The Hottentot," William Collier up, was an easy winner last night at the Cohan Theatre. The Hottentot was a vacehorse with bad habits, and Mr. Collier, acclaimed in a Long Island hunting colony as a great steeplechase rider, was the hero who had to go through with it to win the girl, al-though he dreaded horses. It was a typical Collier role, and is typical Collier role, and in it the suave comedian made some of the best fun of his cureer on the stage.

From his entrance with the rent is his riding breeches—not because it was the first of March; it wasn't that kind of a rent-the thread of the plot with which the heroine romantically began atitching never was lost. Not even when Sam Harrington, Mr. Colliers character, deviated in order to indulge in some personal comedy at the tea table-folding his napkin and saying in his embarrassment as he laid it on the "Some one else might drop in.

From the drop of the flag this was stunny steeplechase. Although the comedy was very "horsey" there was no horse play, and the reasonably polite tone was maintained, with comic variations, as much as is usually done on the stage. Outside of a few purposely serious sentimental scenes ther was literally a laugh with every line. Although of course Mr. Collier le wit about this play, which really amounted to a kindly caricature of the importance to which a sporting fad or pursuit may attain in a country colony Sam Harrington, whose pleasure in rid-ing, to say nothing of going over the jumps, had been ruined by an acciden-some years before, simply had to mak believe to oblige his friends who had in troduced him as a keen rider. Thi worked out convincingly enough. The fabrications of a flossy widow (Miss Andrews) and the ungovernable regard for horses professed by his inamorata (Miss Carson) suprred Sam on.

Determined horseyness displayed by Calvin Thomas and other hard riding actors made a background for the un bridled comedy of Mr. Collier and the rum toting butler. The harassed Sam in his desperation wanted a bridge placed over the phenomenal eighteen foot water jump.
In "The Hottentot" Mr. Collier an

Mme. Carrara's Recital.

Mme. Olga Carrara, a young Italian soprano, who gave a song recital here last season in aid of the families of the Italian reservists, was heard last evening in Carnegie Hall in a programme of delightful selection, beginning with old Italian operatic airs, and including old English and French songs, modern French and American lyrics and an air from Bolto's "Mefistolfele." Mme. Car. rara's singing contained musicanly ing and intelligence in interpretation. She has a clear voice of good range but an uneven tone production, due i part apparently to nervousness, marred her delivery. To two airs in imitation of Italian old style, by Donaudy, she imparted no little charm, and they were much liked. She has a stage presence greatly in her favor for concert appear-

Evidently the objection to the portrayal of historical being in the theatre having been satisfactorily overcome the pageantry began. An especially picturesque and graceful view of Mount Ver-non from the brush of Robert Edmond Jones framed the first picture. Here Mr. Miss Farrar was in very good voice Hampden embodied engagingly the and sang the music of Suor Angelica young manhood of the patriot who as a youth had been surveying the lands of Lord Fairfax in Virginia, but returned eagerly to the farm lands of the Wash-

Industrial Art Show in Museum Wide in Range

The fourth exhibition of work by American manufacturers and designers directly inspired by a study of objects in the Metropolitan Museum's permanent collection was opened to the public yesterday, and Director Edward Robinson and Curator of Industrial Arts Richard F. Bach were enthusiastic over it. The exhibition is small, only one gallery being used, and this is due, part, to the proverbial unrest with its resulting strikes that diminished the Mr .Hampden's playing that provided output-but the quality of the work is commendably high. The objects embrace a wide field There are rugs, fabrics, furniture, tiles, jewelry, costume designs, leather work, metal work, mosaics, lace, &c. A few are direct copies of classic examples, but the greater number are interpretations and adaptations of designs. DIES OF PNEUMONIA Was Oldest Member of Upper House of Congress.

Special to THE SUR AND NEW YORK HERALD Washington, March 1.—Senator John Hollis Bankhead of Alabama died to-day at his home, 1888 Columbia road, after a brief illness with myocarditis He was 78 years old, and had been in Congress first as a member of the House and later as a member of the Mr. and Mrs. Moses Taylor Pyne IN ASSEMBLY WHEN 23 Senate for thirty years. Mrs. Bankhead and their children, Representative William B. Bankhead and Mrs. Arthur G. Lund, were at the bedside.

The death of Senator Bankhead marks the passing of the oldest member of the Senate and the last Confederate veteral in that body. It leaves, in fact, only one Confederate veteran in Congress, Repre-sentative (Major) Charles M. Steadman (N. C.). There still remain several veterans who fought on the Union side.

Although a man of constructive ideas Senator Bankhead was not as well known throughout the country as many of his colleagues. This may have been due in a measure to his aversion to era-tory. He was a leader in the work of the committees on public buildings and rivers and harbors and framed the law for Federal aid to post roads. The Bankhead Highway, which is to run from Washington, D. C., to Los Angeles,

Cal., was named for him. Senator Bankhead's civil war record stood him in good stead with his con-stituency at home. He was wounded three times, and his scars won him many

Senator Bankhead was born in Mos ow, Ala., in 1842. His school education was limited, but the course of reading and study that he pursued in after life made him a well informed man. He began life on a farm. His first public office was in the General Assembly of Alabama, from 1865 to 1867. He was a member of the State Senate from 1876 to 1877, and served in the Nationa House of Representatives from 1880 to 1881.
